SDGs CONFERENCE 2025

IN THE MARGINS OF THE UNGA80th SESSION

24 September 2025 | Wednesday | New York | Hybrid

www.unga-conference.org

In the Margins of the 80th Session of the United Nations General Assembly (UNGA80), the Journalists and Writers Foundation will host the 10th Annual SDGs Conference 2025 in collaboration with 56 civil society organizations from 30 countries on Wednesday, 24 September 2025 in New York. The year 2025 will also mark the 80th anniversary of the establishment of the United Nations and the 10th year of the SDGs Conference.

Journalists and Writers Foundation and its Global Partners are proud to celebrate this milestone by bringing together over 200 high-level UN diplomats, Heads of State, civil society leaders, human rights advocates, journalists, and youth leaders from around the globe. This signature event, along with the JWF High-Level Reception, the SDGs Roundtable Discussions, and the Pioneers in SDGs Awards Ceremony, continues to generate action-oriented and inclusive policy proposals for the implementation of the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and the Pact for the Future, while addressing complex issues and rising threats to international peace and security.

PANEL 1: Digitalization of Sustainable Development and Human Rights Advocacy

The integration of digital technologies into human rights monitoring has transformed the way organizations and activists monitor, report, and respond to violations worldwide. Advanced digital tools have increased transparency and accountability, allowing for more accurate and immediate responses to abuses. These innovations have also empowered grassroots communities to participate actively, enabling marginalized groups to document their experiences and draw international attention to issues that may have previously gone unnoticed.

As technology continues to evolve, its role in safeguarding human rights becomes ever more vital, opening new avenues for advocacy and oversight in complex geopolitical environments.

However, recent advancements also pose significant challenges. Undemocratic regimes often utilize emerging technologies to restrict journalists' space, criminalize human rights work, and suppress freedom of expression and assembly. Such developments highlight the urgent need for multi-stakeholder efforts to develop effective regulatory frameworks, promote digital literacy, and implement safeguards that protect human rights while harnessing the positive potential of digital innovation.

The Pact for the Future strongly advocates for civic technologies to advance the revitalization of the SDGs by promoting citizen engagement, improving access to information, and supporting transparent governance. Platforms enabling participatory decision-making and data sharing foster inclusive development, ensuring marginalized voices are heard and policies are responsive to community needs. Nonetheless, the rise of digital tools also introduces challenges such as misinformation and disinformation, which can hinder progress and deepen societal divisions. Addressing these issues requires strategic collaborations with social media platforms and technology leaders to combat false narratives and promote accurate, reliable information. Such partnerships are essential for creating an environment where digital tools serve as catalysts for positive social change and robust human rights advocacy.

PANEL 2: Women and Youth as Leaders for Civic Engagement and Social Change

The selection of the next UN Secretary-General in 2026 presents a pivotal opportunity to advance gender equality and amplify women's leadership in global governance. Despite some progress, women remain significantly underrepresented in high-level decision-making positions. Promoting inclusive leadership selection processes is essential to overcoming barriers to women's empowerment in political spheres. Highlighting women's leadership not only fosters equitable representation but also introduces diverse perspectives that can inspire innovative solutions to worldwide challenges. Facilitating a dialogue on this topic encourages stakeholders to prioritize gender parity as a fundamental criterion, thereby enhancing the legitimacy and effectiveness of the UN's leadership and its capacity to address global crises.

Simultaneously, setbacks in women's rights across many regions threaten to reverse years of progress toward achieving the SDGs. Backlash against gender equality initiatives, restrictive policies, and societal resistance undermine efforts to empower women and girls affecting their access to quality healthcare, education, and economic opportunities. This resurgence of opposition risks undoing decades of advancements, underscoring the importance of strategic resilience and persistent advocacy. Additionally, ongoing conflicts and social upheavals increase vulnerabilities, especially among youth, highlighting the urgent need to address intergenerational trauma and mental health issues. Building trust among young professionals through inclusive governance and multilateral cooperation is crucial for fostering resilience, promoting meaningful participation in conflict resolution, and securing a sustainable, equitable future amid global uncertainties.

PANEL 3: Cross-Cutting Threats to the Principles of Democracy

According to Freedom House and the V-Dem Institute, in 2024, for the first time in two decades, autocratic regimes outnumber democracies where the rule of law is upheld and public institutions safeguard fundamental human rights for all citizens, regardless of their political, cultural, religious, or gender identities. The rise of these authoritarian governments has posed significant challenges to the stability and efficacy of multilateral efforts aimed at promoting democracy and human rights worldwide. Autocratic leaders often undermine international norms by consolidating power, suppressing dissent, and manipulating legal frameworks to entrench their authority. These dynamic hampers the ability of global institutions and alliances to enforce collective actions, as authoritarian states exploit diplomatic gaps and geopolitical rivalries to resist accountability. Addressing these challenges requires renewed, adaptable multilateral strategies capable of countering the evolving tactics of authoritarian regimes.

In this world of digitalized media ecosystem, a pillar of democratic governance, social media and technological advancements have become powerful tools for amplifying human rights advocacy and active citizen participation. Human rights defenders utilize digital platforms to mobilize support, expose abuses, and foster greater awareness of social justice issues. However, these same tools are increasingly exploited by authoritarian actors to spread disinformation, manipulate public opinion, and undermine trust in traditional media outlets. This erosion of trust in mainstream sources exacerbates social divisions, weakening social cohesion and peace. Furthermore, the digital landscape is intertwined with geopolitical tensions, as states and non-state actors leverage technology to influence public discourse, complicating efforts to maintain global stability and uphold the rule of law.

Civil society organizations face mounting pressures amid these alarming developments, as governments impose legal restrictions, launch defamation campaigns, and enact laws aimed at limiting their activities. Such attacks on civil society threaten to silence dissent, curtail civic space, and diminish the capacity of grassroots movements to advocate for democratic reforms and human rights.

These restrictions often serve to consolidate autocratic power further, destabilizing democratic institutions and fostering environments of fear and repression. As a result, the overall fabric of civil society becomes frayed, undermining efforts to build resilient, inclusive societies capable of resisting authoritarian tendencies and promoting peaceful development.

ROUND 2: GLOBAL YOUTH VOICES FOR PEACE AND JUSTICE

SDGs ROUNDTABLE DISCUSSION 2025

23 September 2025, Tuesday | 10:00am – 1:00pm EST | New York

As a part of the SDGs Conference 2025, the Journalists and Writers Foundation, in partnership with its 56 NGOs from 30 countries, is organizing the SDGs Roundtable Discussion 2025 to discuss critical issues to promote and protect sustainable peace and development. This side-event aims to create a platform for multiple stakeholders, including experts, practitioners, and civil society leaders to raise awareness on social problems and exchange ideas on possible solutions to social, economic, and environmental issues.

10:00am – 11:15am

Round 1: The Role of Interfaith Dialogue for Sustainable Peace and Development

In an increasingly interconnected world, fostering mutual understanding and collaboration among diverse faith communities is crucial for advancing sustainable peace and development. Interfaith dialogue provides a vital platform for building bridges, promoting social cohesion, and addressing shared challenges faced by societies worldwide. Recognizing the significant role faith-based initiatives can play in achieving the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), this roundtable aims to explore how interfaith collaboration can contribute to creating more inclusive, peaceful, and resilient communities. Through dialogue, mutual understanding, and collective action, interfaith communities can make meaningful contributions toward building a more cohesive, equitable, and sustainable world. This event serves as an important step in harnessing the transformative potential of faith-based collaboration to achieve the SDGs and foster lasting peace for future generations.

The discussion will focus on five key areas:

- Sharing Experiences and Best Practices: Cases and success stories from interfaith leaders and practitioners; Lessons learned from various interfaith initiatives and projects

SDGs Conference 2025 | www.unga-conference.org | #UNGA80

- The Significance of Interfaith Collaboration: Role of faith-based efforts in fostering social cohesion and community resilience; Interfaith approaches to conflict resolution and peacebuilding
- Challenges and Obstacles in Interfaith Initiatives: Common barriers such as distrust, miscommunication, and cultural differences; Political, social, and structural challenges impacting interfaith efforts
- Strategic Approaches and Collective Actions: Strategies to overcome resistance and build mutual understanding; Designing inclusive and participatory interfaith programs; Innovative methods to mobilize collective action aligned with SDGs
- Building Partnerships and Networks: Creating sustainable collaborations among faith communities, civil society, and government; Engaging youth and marginalized groups in interfaith dialogue; Developing platforms for ongoing engagement and knowledge sharing

11:30am – 1:00pm

Round 2: Global Youth Voices for Peace and Justice

In today's global world, young people stand at the forefront of advocating for peace, justice, and social cohesion. Their unique perspectives, innovative initiatives, and active participation are vital to fostering sustainable peace and preventing conflicts. This panel aims to showcase the vital role of youth in shaping peaceful societies and to explore strategies for amplifying their voices in decision-making processes at local, national, and global levels.

This roundtable also aims to create a platform for dialogue among youth leaders worldwide in communication with policymakers and practitioners on how youth are promoting peace and justice, leading initiatives that build social cohesion, participating as decision-makers, and cooperating in crisis response efforts.

Empowering youth as active agents of social change is essential for sustainable peace and justice. This panel aims to elevate youth voices, showcase impactful initiatives, and inspire collective action towards a more peaceful and just world. The panel will offer policy recommendations for integrating youth perspectives into peacebuilding and conflict prevention strategies.

The discussion will focus on five key areas:

- Youth Promoting Peace and Justice while Preventing Conflicts: Exploring how young people are actively advocating for human rights, social equity, and conflict prevention and highlighting successful youth-led campaigns and movements that have contributed to peacebuilding.
- Youth-led Initiatives that Build Peace and Social Cohesion: Showcasing innovative projects and grassroots initiatives led by youth that foster dialogue, understanding, and reconciliation within diverse communities.
- Youth and Digital Tools for Peacebuilding: Discussing the role of digital platforms and social media in mobilizing youth for peacebuilding efforts; Exploring how digital platforms and strategies amplify youth voices, facilitate social cohesion, and enhance their active participation in conflict prevention and reconciliation processes.

- Youth Participation as Decisionmakers: Examining the importance of including youth voices in policymaking, peace negotiations, and community leadership; Sharing best practices and challenges in institutionalizing youth participation at different governance levels.
- Youth Cooperation in Crisis Response: Analyzing how young people contribute to emergency response, conflict mitigation, and recovery efforts during crises; Identifying ways to strengthen youth engagement in humanitarian and peacekeeping operations.
